SOUTHEAST ASIAN leaders yesterday signed the first legally binding Convention on Counterterrorism that would make it easier to prosecute and extradite terror suspects. (See key points on Page A5.)

At its 12th annual summit, the 30 leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations also agreed to discuss a plan to form a more cohesive, rules-based organization similar to the European Union that is able to sanction and even expel members that did not follow its policies.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, in her keynote address at the Mactan-Summit Hall, on the lawn of the gathering, declaring that "Nations are committed to expanding its trade forum to become the largest in the world." The leaders have planned to coordinate moves to form the Asian Economic Community by 2015.

"The conceptual commitment of regional leaders to peace, stability and economic prosperity for their peoples will continue to mark a cutting and sharing regional continuity spelling through a challenging act," the President said.

No price tag for Cebu gains in summit

By Rosal W. Domingo

CEBU CITY—THE ECONOMIC BENEFIT of Cebu province's hosting of the 12th Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit is "unmeasurable" compared to Malabon's estimate of P1.2 billion, according to a local business leader.

Foreign Secretary Alberto G. Romulo on Friday said the influx of domestic and foreign delegates during the summit was expected to raise that amount, in addition to sales to local businesses.

Rolando Francisco, president of the Cebu Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said in an interview that was just for the short-term.

"Of course, we do promote the province as an investment location and tourism destination with or without the summit," Francisco said.

In a statement, Romulo said the number of flights at the Mactan-Cebu International Airport had increased by about 10 percent; local firms increased operations while the number of passengers passing through the airport went up by 14 percent.

Romulo added that in the ramp up to the Asian summit, visitors arrived in Cebu

7.9 Japan quake raised tsunami alert from US to RP

TSUNAMI. IMAGI. TSUNAMI waves for northern and eastern Japan on January 11 after a powerful 7.9-magnitude quake struck off the coast of Honshu, a southern island.

Instant watches were also issued for parts of the Pacific, a warning that is serious about tsunamis (two years after a deadly wave off Asia in Indonesia killed more than 200,000 people).

The warning included the Philippines, Guam, Taiwan and Japan.

A 40-centimeter wave was reported at Clark in the Philippines. Waves broke, some 1,000 km south of Tokyo, and even at smaller waves in Indonesia and southern Japan, but there were no reports of injuries and no immediate reports of damage.

An official in the Philippines said they had issued a tsunami alert "level one," which warned residents on the southern and eastern coastlines to seek for the latest information and possible evacuations.

Japan later downgraded the tsunami warning to a "watch." It had earlier issued evacuation warnings for tens of thousands of households in the country.

The United States Geological

Survey put the quake's magnitude at 7.9, a "major" quake, and said its epicenter was 120 km east-southeast of Honshu, Kanto Islands, and 1,370 km southeast of Tokyo.

The same area was struck by a powerful quake in November, prompting evacuations and instant warnings, but in the mid-1990s, the highest being 8.0—struck Japan.

An official in Manila's Foreign Affairs Ministry told Reuters that the threat of tsunamis had passed.

"Half past eight, when Japan's 8.0 quake hit, in Manila, the approximate time the threat of a tsunami was due to expire. This time passed, and the threat did not materialize. Everything is normal," he official said.

Japan Meteorological Agency said that tsunamis as high as a meter could hit parts of Hokkaido and that smaller waves were likely to hit a wide area of Pacific coastal areas from Hokkaido in northern Japan to southern Japan on the country's largest main island of Honshu.

Hokkaido officials urged residents to move to higher ground, and the quake made the coastal areas warning about the possibility of tsunamis. There was only moderate shaking in Hokkaido and no immediate reports of injury due to the quake.

Evacuation warnings showed some coastal residents of Japan evacuating the coastline with thousands from evacuation centers.

"The worst is certain homes," one resident, reading a child, told Reuters.

Internet, phones down in Mindanao

DAVAO CITY—MORE THAN 100,000 experienced disruptions in Internet and telephone services Saturday morning but the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT) said it had yet to ascertain the cause of the problem.

Clara Landino, PLDT team leader for the Visayas and Mindanao, said Internet services broke down in the cities of Zamboanga, Marikina, General Santos and Zamboanga. Internet services broke down in 30 cities.

The status of Zamboanga and Cagayan, he said, also experienced Internet connection problems because of the problem that might have been caused by a storm in a May 2006 earthquake.

Landino said a team had been dispatched to trace the problem.

"We're still looking for the cause of the problem," PLDT said.

Landino said because of the problem, PLDT was now using long connections to restore service to other areas.

He said some areas would still experience connection problems "due to congestion."

The Internet connection in Mindanao, like in many parts of Asia, had not yet returned to normal after a powerful earthquake in December of 2004 damaged the offshore submarine fiber optic cables that link Asian countries with the United States and Europe.

China, Hong Kong, Japan, Singapore, South Korea, Taiwan, Vietnam and other countries all experienced disruptions to their Internet services after the quake hit. Reuters Online, he said.

Mayor stops Cebu rally by himself

CEBU CITY—HUNDREDS OF demonstrators on Saturday night came to the grounds of the convention center where leaders of Southeast Asian nations launched their annual meeting yesterday were stopped from doing so by the timely intervention of Cebu City Mayor Tomas Duterte.

Duterte, known for being so easily frightened and for refusing to back down from unpopular decisions, prevented a violent confrontation between the police and the protesters who were marching toward the Cebu International Convention Center (CICC) in defiance of a police ban on rallies.

The protesters started gathering early yesterday at the Favier Duterte Park in the city center. They carried effigies of President Manuel A. Roxas and a United Nations banner.

Later Duterte intervened in the demonstration after CICC in Mandaue where some of the protesters were being held. "U.S. Out of Asia," shouted the demonstrators.

Duterte marched with the demonstrators for more than three kilometers, until they were stopped by a platoon of riot police in Mandaue, about 200 meters from the convention center on June 10th street, at about noon.

In another move, Duterte stepped in, negotiating with the leaders of the march, he placed an hour-long curfew and the protest was all over.

Freedom Park

The mayor told Francis Reyes and Phil Rodriguez, the secretary general and Cebu head respectively of the Filipino American Movement, that he had already allowed peacefully the whole of Cebu City as their "Freedom Park."

He said the reason that activists were at Mandaue stage protest activities is particularly all parts of the city except in the convention center, the events taken by various delegates as they travel between their hotels and restaurants—where CICC in Mandaue and the thought is that the Mandaue event and the Mandaue event.

The marchers eventually agreed to finish their program where they were stopped. They visited the offices of the mayor, US President George Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone, and quietly dispersed at about 10pm.

Later, Mariano Pineda, the general commander for General Imperial Management, specific police and the military were posted to Mandaue where protesters were the No. 1, because only a demonstration was prevented.

"The protesters have strong support for the mayor, as the mayor has for the protesters," Pineda said.

Duterte has built some goodwill with the militant groups in Cebu, especially after he allowed activists who came from other regions to join the annual protest activities at one of his elementary school in Kawagay District.

By contrast, Governor Reyes Theodore (who has been a no-nonsense no-rally policy in Cebu, going to the police to get the go-ahead for the protest to stop the demonstration.

Key activists, affiliated with Bayan Muna, were jailed on Friday. One of them claimed to have been treated by a policeman when he tried to go past the CICC with other protesters. Associated Press

AIDS: Asean

CEBU—SOUTHEAST ASIAN leaders are being challenged to speed down an AIDS-related program by one another and their close, usually active gay and drug addicts—people who may not easily accept responsibility for a "judgmental society."

At yesterday's opening of the 10th Summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, leaders of the 10 nations also immediately received a 204-page report stating the region has become home to an estimated 1.5 million people with HIV/AIDS.

The "most serious epidemic" of the disease in the whole of Asia was in the Asian countries, and US Undersecretary General Bruce P. Wilson, author of the report which was tabled at the traditional meeting of the leaders held urged to do more for sex workers, gays, addicts

Most of the diversity of HIV and other diseases in the region is not because of the region's location, but because of the human factors, such as the use of drugs and "high risk" sexual practices, the WHO report says. The report says that the HIV epidemic is still in its early stages and that the region is still in a "high risk" state.

WHO estimates regarding the most at-risk groups, however, are limited by the quality of data.

The biggest challenge for the region is to ensure that the most at-risk groups, such as sex workers, drug users and "high risk" sexual practices, are not overlooked.

Twenty-five years after the first cases of AIDS were detected in the region, progress in controlling the disease has been most successful in countries that have promoted "a culture of risk reduction" for the affected population.

Slowdown in some states

In contrast, "some states" such as Myanmar, Laos and Cambodia, have seen a "slowdown" in the disease's spread.

In an interview in Cambodia, WHO's Deputy Director for Eastern Africa, Lindsey explained that while the epidemic spread of AIDS "continues to outpace our efforts, we are starting to see progress in the first time in some countries."

In East and West Africa, the Caribbean, and in Asia's Thailand and Cambodia, infection rates have also started to decline, thanks to strong national prevention efforts, the report says.

Now on an encouraging note, Lindsey said a UNAIDS report in 2001 by AIDS-related research organizations worldwide to reach $7.4 billion by 2005 to combat HIV. Of that sum, 25 percent came from national government budgets.

Some 2.5 million people are infected with HIV/AIDS in Asia, out of the worldwide total of just under 34 million, according to UNAIDS figures.

Of the global total, 2.3 million are under the age of 15, Lindsey said.

The first case of HIV/AIDS in the Asian continent was reported in 1984. By 1990, the virus had spread to all 10 member countries.

Two years later, the epidemic hit millions of HIV/AIDS in the first year as a regional epidemic during the 1990s, according to the report.

People infected

UNAIDS figures show the number of people living with HIV/AIDS in Asian countries, based on estimates in 2000 and those in 2001, as follows:

- China—1.5 million (1.5 million)
- India—1.5 million (1.5 million)
- Indonesia—1.5 million (1.5 million)
- Japan—1.5 million (1.5 million)

Stop talking

THE PRESCRIPTION HAS GROWN OVER THE YEARS: The Association of Southeast Asian Nations is nothing but a talking shop, a diplomatic paper factory, whose purpose is indistinguishable from its principal product: the revelation of weaknesses.

This is, by and large, an unfair perception, driven by such inanity as the swelling pageantry that surrounds the annual summit of the 10 heads of government. There are, in fact, existing arrangements that make ASEAN cooperation a reality. There is, in fact, an existing organization that promotes inter-Asian cooperation, if not actual policy-making.

EDITORIAL
ASEAN summit of the 10 heads of government. There are, in fact, existing arrangements that make ASEAN cooperation a reality. There is, in fact, an existing organization that promotes inter-Asian cooperation, if not actual policy-making.

The Asian's own Eastern Pacific Group (EPG) has issued a set of critical recommendations for the heads of government to act on; from old indications, the Asian leaders will endorse the plan to write a "charter"—a framework for policy-making that is more binding on the member-states—in pursuit of greater regional integration.

A welcome and necessary initiative, but not more costly to being somewhat underdeveloped. We are concerned that current conditions will complicate to prevent ASEAN from meeting this goal.

The natural forces of moderation in the region—old allies Thailand and the Philippines—have lost a great measure of influence in Asian matters, in large part because, in the last half-decade or so, they have been consumed by internal politics. We see this as unfortunate, not because such member countries have not stepped up. They have, especially the other three original ASEAN members, but because the presence of the Philippines and Thailand—longtime in every major regional grouping since the end of World War II—helps explain the region's slow progress.

The worldwide war of attrition with fundamentalist extremists—many of whom maintain bases in different parts of Southeast Asia—threatens to slow ASEAN's progress. We do not require to say that international cooperation in counter-terrorism is unimportant; it is, in fact, vital, and a necessary object of collaboration. But security cooperation does not seem to promise a solid basis for greater political and economic integration.

Next, the problem of Burma (Myanmar) will continue to handicap ASEAN. It is difficult to imagine that an organization as consensus-oriented as ASEAN would play ball with the Burmese generals, who continue to enmesh the regional bloc with their aggressive abhorrence of democratic values.

We realize that the EPG's recommendations include the unprecedented possibility of imposing sanctions on a "stray" member-country in the words of former Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Tan Sri Musa Hitam, chair of the EPG. "The complication to decision-making that has been arrived at by ASEAN on any particular issue or subject will have to be observed. If not, we give the power and space for the leaders of ASEAN to consider all possibilities in terms of enforcement which does not preclude expeditious in very, very serious cases of non-compliance."

Traditional: Even expeditious is now an MBE, if the big member-chairs are to be that way.

But since ASEAN have the political will to impose sanctions on Thailand? We know, because even though we are firm believers in the politics of engagement, we also realize there are natural limits to it. But we doubt whether ASEAN will reach this stage, it seems to us an MBE.

To be sure, so President Fidel Ramos, a member of the EPG, suggests this kind of thinking is all wrong. Instead, he envisions all of a dwelling on the nit-picking of greater integration, we must act for the long term. "This is not about non-compliance or interference or standing in between. We're talking about Asian two generations from now."

If ASEAN's real struggle is with non-compliance, however, two generations is too long a time or wait.

Bush authorized
Iranians' arrest in Iraq, Rice reveals

WASHINGTON—A RECENT SERIES OF US raids against Iranians in Iraq were authorized under an order that President Bush decided to issue several months ago to undertake a broad Military offensive against Iranian operations in the country, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said Friday.

"There has been a decision to go after these networks," she said in an interview with The New York Times in an effort on Friday afternoon, before making her way to the White House.

Rice said Bush had authorized "after a period of time in which we were considering activity among Iranian in Iraq."

She said the activity in Iraq was "not just a matter of the question of whether they were producing," she was referring to what US Military officials say is evidence that many of the most sophisticated super-sophisticated weapons, or SW, being sold against US troops were made in Iraq.

of which Bush issued the order, but said he decided upon a series of questions that the president and members of his National Security Council asked in the fall.

The administration has long accused Iran of meddling in Iraq, providing weapons and training, and its links with the likes of helping the United States helped down in 1998.

But now, despite a series of raids in which Iranian have been seized by US forces in Baghdad and other cities in Iraq, administration officials have declined to say whether Bush ordered such actions.

The White House declined to disclose the aggressive steps against Iranian in Iraq appear to have been the US effort to create new conditions in a new law in the Iraq war administration officials now describe Iran in the single paragraph in the United States law in the Middle East, though some administration officials argued the talks with Iran as a condition to allow attention away from the issue in Iraq.

Key Concerns that President Arroyo will champion in the 12th ASEAN Summit

The key concerns that President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo will champion during the 12th ASEAN Summit and other high-level meetings are nine and best to her vision for the Filipino people. The first priority is a focus on social justice, including care for our low-income natural environment and the protection and welfare of our citizens. That is why the President has chosen the theme of "One Caring and Sharing Community" for the Summit. The second is the value of closer regional economic cooperation and integration to expand the country's markets, increase investments and create jobs here at home. This includes a need to ease for our overseas workers, create energy independence and self-reliance, and to wipe out the corrosive effects of corruption. Finally, the President is focused on bringing together all nations to fight terrorism, promote for protection of our homeland and bring peace to Myanmar and other trouble spots in the region.

Benefits to RP of GMA leadership in ASEAN

The leadership of President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo and other international forums has directly benefited the people of the Philippines. Through her hard work in the international community, the President has generated investments and jobs, strengthened our security in the fight against terrorism, and improved social justice. The President is bringing these benefits home. The upcoming Leaders' Summit is a direct reflection of the leadership of the President's engagement and the honor and prestige she is bringing to the people of the Philippines through the presence of world leaders in Cebu City. The President is tirelessly working for a more, more modern Philippines and to ultimately provide and improve the quality of life of every Filipino. And key to our future success as a nation is our ability to prepare our people to compete and win at home and abroad. To prepare our nation, the President believes that our youths need to have strong performance in their studies. Engagement with other countries introduces all our people, particularly our youths, to the opportunities that the world holds in store for them. The President wants to make sure that all young people must be exposed to the workings of the Summits and the importance of producing new leaders who will guide our great nation in the future.

The Philippines in ASEAN

Since its founding 39 years ago, ASEAN has promoted peace and stability in the region and enhanced sustainable growth among its member countries. Over the years, the Philippines and the Filipino people have benefited from these ASEAN endeavors. Decades of sustained regional stability, there has been increased investment and tourism. Since between the Philippines and its neighbors in the region, and even beyond. On promoting stability, ASEAN supports the Philippines in vital national security questions, notably in the territorial dispute in the South China Sea. ASEAN has been mostly responsible for the emergence of a neutral island in the important sea lane among the dominant countries, Indonesia, Malaysia and Brunei Darussalam from anti-extended colonial aspirations for the peace process in Myanmar. They have facilitated peace talks and ceasefire and have provided dependable backing for the Philippines in the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC). ASEAN has matured from a loose economic grouping to a key regional organization that has touched the lives of the people in the region, ensuring their safety and improving their quality of life. The Philippines has played a key role in ongoing projects of ASEAN that include cooperative projects in the areas of HUMANIZING, community-based care for the elderly, environmental safety and health, sustainable employment, public culture, gender, smaller exchanges, ASEAN pioneering network, social welfare, family and education, and land use and natural resource management. The Philippines also actively participated and even initiated cooperative efforts in the fight against terrorism, energy sharing, tourism promotion, human resource development, poverty eradication and protection of migrant workers.

Mythical Mt. Banahaw

By Patrick A. Brown
Contributor

IT IS HARD TO IMAGINE THE rows of Mojave in Laguna without Mr. Randness. Standing about 5,000 feet above sea level, the mountain serves as a majestic backdrop to the town, like a giant hand. Once upon a time, Mr. Randness was a witness. But after a single moment, it felt like a deep sleep from which it has yet to wake. Graced left by the eruption became a refuge that now feels a class of beautiful wasteland.

Mr. Baathore stresses in general what scientists say about increasing influencing atmospheric conditions. In Maryland, the latest severe weather forecast last week April, the peak of the dry season is over the Philippines.

Yes, Erase, Laguna's capital town, may be sweltering but it will be raining hard in May. This is why some residents laughingly regard themselves as under a shower, the national Pilipino lullaby washing over.

Disappearing waterfalls

After the rain, the fog covering the mountain rises, surrounding the waterfalls cascading side by side. These waterfalls do not remain visible for long. They gradually disappear, and are totally gone from sight just a short time later.

Mojave has seen the devastating flash floods that have claimed lives in other places situated at the foot of a mountain. This may be because Mr. Ranshaw will see back country where wild vehicles roam on trails, and wild animals like deer and wild horses that are easily scared.

What keeps Elk Bayshore relatively untouched is not any grassroots law or the preservation of wildlife. Actually, there is an active effort to quarry the mountains, not from a misguided influence.

Majority Mayor Tim Scott also admits that protecting the monuments has never been in his agenda since he assumed office in 2004.

"People are just scared because life, damn, how [punishes] those who mess with it!"

While saying this, he recalls stories about how the man-made "Upended" itself to back up his claim.

Unexplained incidents

In 1983, a man reportedly died in MI. The SCIENTIFICALLY named Amiotes Quilgoana, this amble that has almost sold people Miami goes largely on Mr. Stuchlik.

What keeps the mountain safe from destruction by humans may be the legends handed down through generations.

made explosives called potpourri, the brother-in-law who accompanied him and was wounded, said while they were eating, one of the explosives called out of their bags and, after bumping against a fire case, exploded right in front of the other man, killing him instantly.

Another man disappeared in the woods while gathering berries. After days of searching, he was found in a gully talking to himself. When he recovered, he said a bear had covered his location, making it difficult for him to find his way until he passed out from exhaustion.

Bouillon, during his first term, had to change the layout of his Indian road project for a highway to the town of Mi. Shanahne because the highway always broke down when it moved in a particular direction. Once the agreement was reached to another city, it was

TO APPRECIATE HIS Banahattem festival: one has to go up the mountain.

At the bottom part of Mt. Narachi in Tago-dogutsu, an area considered holy, it is said that one should not meddle in the place or he/she will face danger. A medical student was reported to have fallen into the water and almost drowned when he attempted to pick an orchid beside a water fall.

Along Prince George, a retired Minko carpenter, calls about a single vine growing near Inlet-Station. He says the single vine without had been a cross mark, under the leaves (available to women).

Two-day in-person

To appreciate Mt. Rushmore better, one has to go up the mountain. The journey takes two days and, toward the end, is about 1,200 feet to the summit, the terrain becomes difficult. You have to climb up boulders and take water with you to trigger an adrenaline rush.

The summit of Mt. Raitohara is an expanse of green grass with some sparse trees. Though one hears the sound of running water, no trace of any other bodies of water can be seen at the top. This seems to confirm the belief of old Miyazaki residents in an underground lake.

Mr. Sandhu has five wonderful, but only one, the Hugging Baby, Sonar, is accessible by road. Visitors are advised to bring their own provisions, such as food/bath/toiletries.

If taken 25 minutes to drive to Kluge's Villa Bressan from the podium. Along the way, visitors can visit the Shrine of Virgin Mary located over the Otta River at the entrance of the town.

Some people who bought this shirt in certain stores are finding it difficult to enjoy their investment. The price, of course, was pre-aid before conditions, but, in some instances, developers were overcome by bad times and/or the aid promised was never received.

HOOKED RECENTLY RE-joined two young grade-mates who will surely rock the heavenly skies. Although born a decade apart, both moved in similar social circles and were loved and admired by so many people.

If there was an extremely original way in which to leave this world, my cousin, Ernest John "E.J." Liton, knew it. He knew just how to go with the flow (I admit) last Sunday, the birthday of his beloved wife Rusty. E.J. knew how to reach all the folks who had touched his life, giving them all ample time to feel less bereaved.

With all the advancements in medical technology and high-speed communication, E.J.'s personal milestones were going into an eternal void and were continuously repeated via text. I admittedly "killed" him several times by forwarding text of his ac-

ANGEL LOC SIN

A 'hurting' Angel...

Interview by R1

looked lost in that wonderfully human face of yours but underneath that smile that only those in close and deeper intimacy spaces would appreciate.

1-Stephan: I think you're very much like a sister who, exhausted from everything, were after dinner were, decided to plant his hand in the sand and sit down to watch the sea. But you were just watching. Your eye is not towards the horizon, eyes that perceive, waiting.

Angel refused to divulge the real reason for the "hurting." "That's very private," she said. "I don't want to be saying anything about this."

She smiled. But One, who was being asked to answer Bagong Agos, had been here to see.

She smiled that as they went to the island. "Not having enough time to give answers enough," she said, admitting that she was often the one from her seat.

Angel also said she wasn't sharing the story on Oye Day but that, since the holiday, she had to do something. "That's a new way to get into a holiday here," she said. "I'm a person who with the right people, like you, I can be a life-giver."

Scour through this and live longer, right? When that perfect wave comes, we want to watch you go over there and catch it.
